"PRODESSE CIVIBUS."

PUBLISHED (EVERY TUESDAY AND FRIDAY) BY
JOHN I. SCULL & MORGAN NEVILLE,
In Fourth Street, between Market and Wood Streets.

Dissolution of Partnership.

THE partnership heretofore existing under the firm of Adams & Nimerick was dissolved on the first of April last, by mutual consent. All those having demands against said firm are desired to present their accounts to William Nimerick for settlement, and all those indebted to said firm are requested to make him immediate payment as he is duly authorised to receive the same.

GABRIEL ADAMS,
WM. NIMERICK.

Pittsburgh, June 16th.

☞ The business will be carried on as usual by William Nimerick, at their old stand, in Market street, who thankful for past favors, begs a continuance of public patronage.

Half Cent Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber, on Thursday the 20th ult, a bound boy, named James M'Combs, about 15 years of age, brown hair, tolerable stout built, generally substitutes the word what for that. The above reward, but no charges will be given for his apprehension—all persons are cautioned against harbouring said boy, as I am determined to punish as far as the law directs.

JOHN M'DONNELL.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale the following very valuable Tracts of Land situated in Beaver county, North-Sewickly township, state of Pennsylvania, in Leets' district of depreciation lands: viz.

No. 190—216 acres or thereabouts, with allowance—On which tract is erected a good frame dwelling house, a barn, and other out houses, with about 30 acres cleared, and an excellent spring before the house.

No. 178—130 acres—To this tract belongs one third part of a Saw-Mill and has about 18 acres cleared.

No. 173—208½ acres and allowance, on which is cleared about 16 acres. These three tracts lay contigious to each other, and have between 3 and 400 acres of first rate bottom land, and particularly calculated for grazing farms, and large dairies—it is well watered by Connequenessing and Brush creeks, besides small brooks and springs—with a good Mill seat on Brush creek—lying in a very thriving settlement, from 3½ to 6 miles from two Iron works, and surrounded by 4 merchants mills, at the distance of 1½ to 6 miles. It is about 5 miles and a half from Harmony, 9 miles from Beaver town, and 25 from Pittsburgh. For further information, apply to Benjamin Runyon, esq. near the premises or to Dr. James Agnew, in Pittsburgh, as that gentleman is perfectly acquainted with the above property, or to the subscriber.

ALSO

1150 acres of first rate upland, on Toby's or Stump creek, Armstrong county, from 2½ to 6 miles from the Allegheny river: viz.

No. 450—containing 333 acres, with a good improvement on it.

No. 891—400 acres, with two good improvements on it, with about 60 acres cleared.

No. 404—containing 419 acres, with two improvements on it, and a Tan-yard, lying on the waters of Cherry run. These lots are of superiour quality, and have the advantage of water conveyance, and would be valuable to proprietors residing on them.

ALSO

That beautiful situated FARM, called

Hamilton Hall,

10 miles from Pittsburgh, on the Monongahela river, containing 205 acres of land—of which there is about 140 acres of first rate river and creek bottom, with an excellent stream of water, on which is erected a new Saw-Mill: it is deemed unnecessary to say any thing in praise of this property as it is well known to be one of the handsomest Farms in Allegheny county; and as it is presumed that persons wishing to purchase will take a minute survey of this property, in every respect worthy the attention of monied men. No objection would be made to take in part pay, good property in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia or Baltimore, at a reasonable valuation. For further information apply to the proprietor at Hamilton Hall Mifflin township Allegheny county, nearly opposite the mouth of Turtle creek.

To Tanners. Distillers, & Farmers.

THE subscriber assignee of JARED OLD'S PATENT IRON MILL for Grinding Bark, Corn and Cobb, &c. for the States of Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, informs the public that they are made and kept for sale by Mr. George Sutton who is sole agent in Pittsburgh to sell Mills in those states, their utility in grinding bark is well known and established to be the best in use. To Distillers they answer a valuable purpose to shell corn and grind the cobb, and by distilling the cobb it is found to make a saving of about one fifth of this method.—To Farmers, to grind feed for cattle, the mill will crack nearly all the corn and grind the cobb quite fine.—There are now a considerable number of those mills in use for that purpose, and are highly approved of—Distillers and Farmers in the above states are solicited to make trial of them.—I will warrant them to answer the purpose as described.

Orders for mills will be attended to by Mr. George Sutton, where they can only be had in Pittsburgh, and will be by him forwarded.

For the information of the public I give this NOTICE.

That all mills, sold in the above states by agents of Luther Gale, is an infringement on my right, nor has there any of Gale's mills been sold or used in the western country for grinding bark to my knowledge. Jared Olds' improvement consists of an Iron hopper cast solid on the cylinder or tube and cogs or sharp pointed teeth placed in rows on the inside of the mill. I therefore forbid all persons from making, using or selling mills of the above description in Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, without authority from myself or Calvin Bates and our agents, as all persons found violating said patent, may rest assured that sooner or later they will pay us for our right, if there is law and justice to recover it

BLANKS PRINED AT THIS OFFICE

The Pittsburgh Gazette.

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 19, 1818.

The Wanderer,

By EDWARD ENNUI.

No. 5.

"Thrice happy he! who on the sunless side
Of a romantic mountain, forest crown'd,
Beneath the whole collected shade reclines."

The sultry beams of summer, while they ripen the fruits of the earth, bring to the husbandman the fruition of his labours, and display a rich profusion of Heavenly beneficence, are most truly cheerless to the idle and voluptuous. The man whose mind is actively employed, whether in study or in the common affairs of life, requires no stimulant to brace his nerves, or exhilarate his spirits. To him rest is enjoyment, and the conversation of a friend, or the interchange with an acquaintance of those little courtesies which sweeten life, is a luxury. Cheerfulness is the offspring of industry, the nurseling of temperance, and companion of content.

But the idler or the voluptuary, soon exhausts the stock of pleasure which nature furnishes, and panting after variety, flies to the festive board of fashion, whose inventive genius, daily supplies some new luxury to the pampered palates of her adherents. The genial season, however, which is greeted with smiles by the needy sons of labour, and with emotions of gratitude by reflecting minds, is a source of no little perplexity to this fickle goddess, and her improvident adherents. The concert, the ball, and the play, no more display their syren fascinations, the brilliant saloon is no longer lighted, and the listless lounger, weary of the heavy hours, strolls about from scene to scene, with a relaxed and enervated frame, and a peevish discontented mind. The burthen of time which falls so heavily on careless shoulders, must be lightened, and reflection, that enemy to polite recreation and fashionable ease, must be driven from the field. The book of nature, which, like the holy bible, is open to all, though sought by few, and whose treasures, like hers, are loudly praised, and sedulously neglected, is then remembered as a last resort, and recurred to as a friend in need.

Such were my reflections, when to wile away a tedious summer, which is now numbered with "the years beyond the flood," I bent my steps from a dull metropolis, to a fashionable watering-place; and as my worthy and well beloved companions in idleness, are about to be placed in the same dilemma, from which I then so happily escaped, it may not be uninteresting to sketch, however slightly, some of the scenes which I visited. I may perhaps be accused of partiality for my own native soil, or suspected of a design to prevent the emigration of beauty to our sister states, when I appear as the eulogist of the green vallies and rocky cliffs of Pennsylvania; but I do assert, that he who wishes exercise, or seeks adventure, will be sure to find them upon our mountains; and that the man must have sluggish blood and cold affections, who crosses the Allegheny ridge without being roused to activity. The roads, though none can pass them with indifference, are peculiarly charming to the invalid or nervous constitution; being in some places so soft as to banish all fear of fractured limbs in case of accident, and in others delightfully varied with ——rock, and slope, and forest brown."

The traveller mounts and descends successively, until he attains the highest elevation. As he passes over the pile of mountains which compose the great ridge, he finds himself sometimes on the brink of a precipice, sometimes in the depth of an abyss; he sees around him the most stupendous works of nature, her wildest and most savage features, combined with her more soft and richer traits. But nature is not always seen in her pristine charms alone, for even here the unwearied hand of art has traced her lineaments; the foot of hardy enterprize has pierced these regions, and industry pitched her tents in the solitude. The humble wary hunter, receding from tide of society and neighbourhood, is found in those places which are least accessible to the footstep of man. The social husbandman, more true to nature, erects his cottage in the fertile valley, where his labours yield him an abundant harvest, and where he finds society accumulating around him. The victims of penury, oppression and misfortune, here find secure retreats, and the weary emigrant sees no tyrant to cross his footsteps, and no extortion to sweep away his honest earnings.

Buried among these mountains, is one of those delightful retreats to which the invalid flies in search of health, and where beauty, wealth, and fashion display their fascinations. Situated in a pleasant valley, and surrounded by a healthful country, and a romantic scenery, the springs at Bedford present many allurements; and when we learn that this spot has been given to the public by the munificence of an individual, and prepared for their reception, by the spirited exertions of a few active citizens, the generous mind so far from discovering that any thing is wanting, is apt to wonder that so much is offered. We find not here, it is true, the luxuries that please a pampered palate, the dissipated scenes which drown reflection, or the amusements which intoxicate the fancy; but we have groves not less inviting than those of Arcadia, and fountains as pure as those of Pieria. Among the inhabitants we find ease, simplicity, and social feeling, and among the visitants, taste and elegance. We meet here the critical Philadelphian, the hospitable Marylander and the polite Virginian; and the variety is frequently encreased by the addition of a stray Yankee or a foreigner. In short, enjoyment may here be found in abundance, by those who possess taste without fastidiousness, and who are willing as well to be pleased themselves, as to contribute to the amusement of others; and there is therefore no apology necessary for calling the attention of such, to a spot, to which I came a stranger, where I remained a happy guest, and whence I departed a grateful friend.

ARBUTHNOT AND AMBRUSTER.

The evidence against both, we understand, was clear and strong. Letters advising the enemy of the movements of our army, and how to act, were intercepted. Documents were also found, proving beyond doubt, that a criminal correspondence had been some time kept up by them and the governor of New-Providence, with the Indians and renegado negroes in Florida. But how indignant must every one be when informed that the prophet Francis, who was hanged a little before, had in his pocket a commission of brigadier general from the British government, supposed to have been given to him during his late visit to England, whence he had not long returned. As a scrutiny, we are assured, will develope the blackest perfidy towards this country, Great-Britain will likely be disposed to let the matter rest where it is.

Gen. Jackson, with a regiment of regulars and the Tennessee volunteers, crossed the Appalachicola Bay on the 7th inst. and expected to reach Pensacola distant about 200 miles last Thursday. He will probably take possession of the place, and leave in it a sufficient garrison for its defence, and the protection of our adjacent frontier settlements.

A detachment of 350 men has been left at fort Gadsden, 200 at St. Marks, and about 250 at fort Scott, under the command of Gen. Gaines, to overawe and effectually subdue the Indians in that quarter; and a naval force has been ordered to cruize on the south side of Florida point, for the purpose of cutting off the supplies which such of them as have fled to Lake Mayence might otherwise receive from the contiguous British islands.

We are informed that Gen. Jackson speaks of retiring from the military service of the country very soon. The rapid decay of his constitution, occasioned by great bodily fatigue & exposure, is stated to be the cause. The whole army, it is said, have suffered inconceivably—an officer declares that he has never seen such emaciated troops. The prosecution of the Seminole war has probably been attended with as many privations to the soldier and as much expense to the government, as any contest ever was, of no longer duration or greater magnitude.

The report of Gen. Gaines being under arrest, we are glad to learn, is without foundation.—Georgia Journal, May 26.

A Sackett's Harbour paper contains an invitation to the inhabitants to attend the re-interment of the remains of the late Brig. Gen. Z. M. Pike, and also of Captains Spencer and Nicholson. It was to have taken place on the 28th ult.

The Bush negroes in Demarara have caused considerable alarm by murdering and robbing white people. Several expeditions had been undertaken against them, but had been unsuccessful, as they dispersed and fled on being approached by any military force. There was a great falling in the revenue of Demarara last year, and a great increase in the expenditure.

Warning to Slanderers.—At the late Court of Common Pleas for this county, a person was fined $ 500 for circulating an evil report about a lady of good repute.

The U. S. troops at Plattsburgh have been ordered to renew their labours on the military road commenced last season near that place.

The Glow-Worm an Article of Dress. In several towns in Italy, the women are said to use this splendid little insect to decorate their heads. At the public Balls and Assemblies the ladies have their hair fancifully and brilliantly illuminated with the Glow-Worm.

Animal Flower.—The inhabitants of St. Lucia have discovered a most singular plant. In a cavern of that isle, near the sea, is a very large basin, from twelve to fifteen feet deep, the water of which is very brackish, and the bottom composed of rocks. From these, at all times, proceed certain substances, which present, at first sight, beautiful flowers, of a bright shining colour, and pretty nearly resembling our mary-golds—only that their tint is more lively.—These seeming flowers on the approach of a hand or instrument, retire, like a snail, out of sight. On examining their substance closely, there appear, in the middle of the disk, four brown filaments, resembling spiders' legs, which move round a kind of petals with a pretty brisk and spontaneous motion. These legs have pincers to seize their prey; and, upon seizing it, the yellow petals immediately close, so that it cannot escape. Under this exterior of a flower is a brown stalk, of the bigness of a raven's quill, and which appears to be the body of some animal. It is probable this strange creature lives on the spawn of fish, and the marine insects thrown by the sea into the basin.

A Grand Desideratum suppiled to Navigators.—Dr. JOEL ARBOT, a Representative in Congress from Georgia, has invented and patented an instrument by which the Longitude may be easily and accurately ascertained at all times and places. Its qualities have been amply tested during one or more voyages. We are informed by a scientific gentleman, who has seen and inspected the model, that it is very simple in its construction, and appears well calculated to answer the end proposed. We hope Georgia may derive more honour from the invention of this important instrument, than Jersey did from that of her GODFREY's Quadrant.

MORE WONDERS

"Mention has been made of an onion, being raised at Brewer, Maine, which measured 16 inches in circumference; but many have been raised in Dedham, which measured three feet in circumference, and weighed upwards of one hundred pounds.

Boston Palladium of May 26.

The facts stated above are surprising, and the productions may be uncommon, for the present age, yet they dwindle into insignificance when placed side by side, with those of former years. We need not go back to antediluvian ages, when there were giants on the earth, to search for gigantic vegetable productions. We have heard our grandmother relate the story of a pumpkin vine, planted in her garden; it was more than three miles in length; ran over a river of thirty rods broad, and served for the whole summer, as a bridge, on which the neighbouring farmers passed with their waggons of hay and grain. On or near the end of the vine, grew a PUMPKIN, of surprising dimension. We do not [illegible] the number of feet, diameter or circumference; but it is a notorious fact, that a sow, the property of a neighbour, after being lost for two or three weeks, and supposed to be dead, was accidentally discovered in the pumpkin; she had eaten a hole through one of the sides, excavated a large nest, and had there brought forth a litter of NINETEEN PIGS, which were then in prime order for roasting. The dry shell of the pumpkin, was occupied for several years during the winter, for the purpose of housing a flock of sheep.—Galaxy.

"A cow in Milton, Massachusetts, has had 4 calves within 316 days; & a sheep in Washington, New-Hampshire, has had fourteen lambs in four years, (four at each of the two yeanings, and three at each of other two yeanings.") ib.

This amazing fecundity does not surpass an instance which we have in our power to relate. A very near neighbour to our aforesaid grandmother, who followed the occupation of ditching, by accident, left his stub-hoe in a meadow, where it was suffered to remain through the winter. Early in the spring, the hoe was found, with SEVEN YOUNG ONES, all with handles, and nearly full grown and fit for use. ibid.

EXTRAORDINARY WOMAN.

The Paris papers recount prodigies of a woman in the neighbourhood of Lyons. The circumstances of her case have confounded the Philosophers and left her no credit with men unaccustomed to scientific reasonings. Learning hesitates, because it wants principles to explain; —ignorance decides at once, because it knows not the variety of undiscovered principles which exist.

The case of this woman is, that of a confusion of all the senses—of seeing, smelling, hearing, touching, tasting. The quality of one sense seems transferred to another; there is a kind of organic confusion and substitution; the eyes do duty for the ears, and the taste for the eyes, and the touch for the taste.

A very learned physician, a writer in the Journal de Sante, gives an account of having visited this woman at Lyons:

"To believe in apparent impossibilities (he says) is often the necessity of men of science, but it is their good fortune likewise to discover that the world contains many more miracles than is at first imagined, and that nothing is impossible, as referred to the omnipotence of the Deity, are that impossibilities as much rarer in the combination of human life than the vanity of science will acknowledge.

"This woman, whom I visited, and to whom I presented several sorts of medicines, powders, simples, compounds, and many other substances, which I am convinced she never saw before, told me their several tastes, as nearly and with as much precision, as taste could pronounce. She described them, indeed with astonishing exactness, and frequently when my palate was confounded.

"Her eyes were next bound with a thick bandage, and I drew from my pocket several sort of ribbands. All those that differed in their original colours she immediately told me. It was in vain to attempt puzzling her; she made no mistake; she passed the ribbands merely through her hand, and immediately decided on its peculiar colour. She could in fact decide upon the quality of any thing by the touch or taste, as accurately as I could with my eyes.

"The organs of hearing were then closed, as well as the contrivance of stuffing the ears would answer the purpose. I then commenced a conversation with a friend in apartment, and spoke in an almost inaudible whisper. She repeated with great power of memory, every word of the conversation. In short, I came away a convert, in other words I believed what I had seen. A philosopher knows the fallibility of the senses; but he should know likewise that science ought not to reject because it cannot have demonstration.

Unhappy case—danger of conviction on presumptive testimony.—David Anderson was tried last summer in Otsego county, for stealing a trunk, containing property to the amount of $ 150, which belonged to a Mr. Lynde, and was supposed to have dropped from the stage about two and an half miles from Cherry Valley. The stage passed the house of Anderson, who soon followed after it.—The trunk was soon missed, and the driver returned, met Anderson, who was also seen on the road by some other persons. No other person was seen in a situation which enabled him to take the trunk. Many other circumstances were against him, and he was convicted; but after four months imprisonment was discharged. The Supreme Court having decided that if he did find and take the trunk it was not felony. Subsequently Mr. Lynde commenced a suit against Anderson for the property in the trunk, and recovered the amount; and the judgment has been satisfied by a sale of his property. Since which, and very recently, it has been ascertained that Anderson was entirely innocent; another person, a black man, has been discovered to have taken the trunk, and has confessed the fact. Thus an innocent man has suffered the loss of reputation, property and liberty, for the guilt of another.

For Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale, in behalf of herself and the heirs of the late William Irwin Thompson, deceased, that valuable FARM on which she now lives, situate ten miles above Pittsburgh, on the south-west bank of the Monongahela river, immediately opposite the mouth of Turtle creek, containing 266 acres and allowance, sixty of which is river bottom and under cultivation, on which is erected a two story log House, (yet in an unfinished state) with a back building, also, a common log barn, with a ferry house, a good garden and a thriving young orchard of bearing fruit trees. The balance of the farm is arable upland of a superior quality, thirty acres of which is cleared and under good fence, with a tolerable good house on it; the remainder of the upland is well timbered, with several excellent springs of water and an inexhaustible bank of stone coal. The situation is well calculated to promote the interest of an industrious farmer, as well on account of the goodness of the soil, as the facility with which he may transport its produce to the Pittsburgh market.

The terms will be made easy to the purchaser and an indisputable title will be given.

PITTSBURGH.

Friday Morning, June 19.

The Cashier of the "Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Pittsburgh" has received a letter from three magistrates of Ogdensburgh, in the state of New-York, informing him of the arrest and imprisonment, in that place of Joseph L. Pluymart, one of the robbers of the Bank, who, it may be recollected, broke jail and escaped from Cincinnati some weeks since. It appears that this man has in his possession, the balance of the stolen money, which from the statement of Emmons, we presumed had been thrown into the Ohio river, when they were first arrested. It is highly probable that Pluymart, after breaking jail returned to the place where the money was concealed, and took the gold, &c. which was missing, when Emmons discovered the plunder. There were a number of tracks at the spot, when it was found, and Emmons evinced great fear on observing them, as he thought they corresponded with the size of Pluymart's feet. The place was too wild and the hill too steep to offer any inducement, even for the hunter.

Another letter from Baton Rouge to the Cashier states, that a man who calls himself Julius Emmons has been arrested there, as answering the description of Joseph L. Pluymart. The Cashier has written on to remove the suspicion.

Since the above was in type, the following letter has been received:

Ogdensburgh, June 3, 1818.

St Lawrence County, State of N. York.

MORGAN NEVILLE, Esq.

SIR,

On Friday last, Joseph L. Pluymart, was apprehended in this village, on suspicion of having been concerned in the robbery of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Pittsburgh, and was committed to the jail of this county. About $5000 in gold and bills were found with him, which are in the hands of the magistrates; a particular description of which was forwarded by them, to you, on Saturday last, per mail. On Sunday night Pluymart, with two other prisoners, broke the jail and effected their escape. Immediately pursuit was made and an additional reward of 50 dollars was offered for the apprehension of Pluymart.—He was re-taken about 15 miles from this place, and to day has been again lodged in jail, where we hope to retain him until he can be demanded from the executive of this state, by the authority in yours. He appears to be a consummate villain, and as no doubt exists of the identity of the man described in your advertisement, and in that of Messrs. Peebles and Leckey, Directors of the Bank, every requisite precaution will be used to secure him.—We hope, however, immediate means will be taken on behalf of the Bank, to identify the money and the man, and to have him conveyed to his proper place of trial.

We are, sir,
very respectfully,
your obedient servants,

NATHAN FORD,
JOHN SCOTT,
LOUIS HASBROUCK, } Justices of the Peace.

The Editors of the "Western Spy" in making some observations on some editorial remarks of a late "Gazette," say, they were "much diverted at the advertisement of the Cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics bank of Pittsburgh, in which he asserts that he can identify the stolen notes, and that he will not redeem them." The said ingenuous gentlemen then ask, "by what kind of intuition is the cashier enabled to distinguish his notes, and by what law, municipal or moral, could he object to redeeming them?" They conclude with a scrap of morality, by observing "that such conduct is calculated to cast a stain on the institution." We are the last people in the world, who would wish to spoil any kind of diversion; we hope our brethren of Cincinnati, have enjoyed themselves, to the utmost, in the interval that has elapsed since the advertisement, for without wishing to damp their good humour, we must now inform them, there certainly was not the slightest occasion, either for their laughing or their morality. That the bank was really robbed, I presume will not now be denied, even in Cincinnati; for although a degree of scepticism was there evinced, worthy of the days of Dr. Doubty, yet as Emmons has discovered the stolen money, not only to directors, but to some of our first characters, who are neither stockholders nor directors, we hardly think that a negatur will be entered against this position. This fact being granted, we proceed to inform our friends below, that the Cashier was able to identify a large portion of the notes (and this is all he pretended to do) by the simplest means in the world; it was not an instance of the

"dignus vindice nodus."

here was not the least necessity for the intervention of intuition, or any supernatural power whatever. The Cashier would have recognized the paper by good substantial marks, made by himself; and these marks were privately communicated to the different cashiers; for this fact, we refer to those officers in Cincinnati. This wonder, therefore, we humbly apprehend, is removed. As to the immorality of refusing to redeem the stolen notes, after a full and legal notice was given to the world of the risk in taking them, we really cannot discover it. The earliest opportunity was taken of giving the information, and certainly this was all that could be done. The whole proceeding was open and fair; no individual could plead want of knowledge. As to the municipal law, we refer the editors to the professional gentlemen to whom they allude. They will inform them that a stolen note, like a stolen horse, can be reclaimed. That after legal notice of a robbery, there can be, in law, no innocent receiver; something incorrect would be implied in equity, and the burthen of explanation, if not the onus probandi, would be thrown upon the holder. As the object of the advertisement was to encrease the chances of a discovery, by destroying the credit of the notes for a time, we see nothing in it that ought to cast the slightest stain on the character of the institution. It was the deliberate act of the stockholders, for the purpose of preventing the plunderers from throwing into circulation a mass of notes, which it would have injured the bank to redeem, and which might have destroyed the characters of the holders.

In the year 1732 Doctor Franklin first published Poor Richard's Almanack, which he continued for 25 years. His newspaper at the same time was steadily employed as a means not only of procuring wealth, but (says the Analectic Magazine) of enlightening the judgment and strengthening the morals of his countrymen. In the narrative of his life, lately published, the Doctor speaks thus of his editorial labours. "In the conduct of my newspaper I carefully excluded all libelling, and personal abuse, which is of late years become so disgraceful to our country. Whenever I was solicited to insert any thing of that kind, my answer was, that having contracted with my subscribers to furnish them what might be either useful or entertaining, I could not fill their papers with private altercation, with which they had no concern, without doing them manifest injustice. Now many of our printers make no scruple of gratifying the malice of individuals (☞ and their own,) by false accusations of the fairest characters among ourselves," &c.

The "Paradise Lost," is the only poem in which we find that uniformity which satisfies the judgment, & that variety which pleases the imagination. All the episodes of this poem, are like radii which point to the centre of a perfect circle. What being on earth, is not delighted with the interview between Adam and the Angel? Who can resist the feelings of admiration at the bold traits which compose the subtle, intrepid, and unpitying character of Satan? Who is not elevated by the sublimity and wisdom with which the Supreme Being is delineated, and the majesty with which he speaks? Milton has indeed drawn a portrait of the All Powerful, with as much correctness as mortal imperfection will permit. Pagans, Jews, and some modern sects, represent God as a cruel tyrent. The God of Milton is a creator and a judge; but his justice is consistent with his benevolence. His power detracts not from the liberty of man. His descriptions are so animated as to monopolize every feeling of the reader. Milton in this respect, is as much above the ancient poets, as our religion is above the heathen mythology.

In examining particularly a map of the world, and adverting to the causes of the greatness of some of the European nations, we are disposed to make certain calculations, which may be extravagant and chimerical; but wild as they appear, they have taken such fast hold on our minds, that reason cannot remove them. These calculations relate to the future splendour, (not happiness) of Russia and America. These two nations were the last to emerge from barbarism, and the impetus created in the one from bursting the trammels of ignorance, and in the other by the revolution, is carrying them, with the rapidity of a comet, in its approach to the sun, to that political eminence that in former days would have been viewed as presumption to have even been fancied. The resources of Russia were probably first completely developed under the first Peter. This great man, in spite of the ferocity and coarseness which marked his character, perceived the real interests and powers of his country at an early period of his life. Happily for Russia, his genius and policy led him to cultivate the substantial branches of improvement in entire exclusion of those of mere taste. He was not ignorant of the value of the fine arts, but a foundation to build these on, was first necessary. Peter in the shipyard, and Peter sitting in the cobler's stall, must not be viewed either as a man of vulgar propensities, or of contracted mind. His object was to create a respect for the mechanic art—his mind was calculated for the improvement of a country in any age. If the genius of his subjects had required it, he could have been an Alfred or a Frederick. The second Catharine began the task of smoothing the roughness of the Russian character, and she proved it capable of great elevation.—Her grandson Alexander seems fitted to finish the undertaking commenced by that great woman; he is ardently devoting himself to the real interests of his country. If, however, ambition has a seat in his breast, the masculine energy of his people, their courage in war, and patience under the greatest hardships, will be able to place him on that eminence of renown, that many conquerors have attempted in vain to reach. Between his frontiers and the British possessions in Hindostan, there is hardly an obstacle to impede his progress. He would have to traverse many countries, and pass through a variety of nations, but these are fertile, and their climates fine, calculated to afford every facility to an invading army; the inhabitants are generally sunk in luxury, or discontented with their governments. As for their military genius, the success of the British, in the Peninsula affords a fine specimen. In fact, the days of Timour, of Jenghis and of Nadir are long past in Asia. An army of three hundred thousand Russians would march with but little impediment, from Moscow to Delhi, and Alexander might almost as easily establish a confederation of Asia, as Napoleon did that of the Rhine. What is to hinder him? The Tuetones, the Cimbri, and other barbarous nations succeeded against the western empire in Italy, conquered Spain, and even crossed the Mediteranean into Africa, when they really had a warlike foe to contend with. Why could not an equally brave people, with all the advantages of system, and of the greatest improvements in war, be equally successful against a more contemptible enemy?—Turkey, both in Europe and Asia, must fall; it is for the interest of humanity that it should; their abominable system of religion, composed of cruelty and sensuality, is only calculated to debase mankind to the lowest point. The country is generally delightful, and for the benefit of the civilized world it ought to be conquered. Its dependencies in Africa, would crumble of course; Tunis, Tripoli and Algiers, those scourges of christendom, which have existed so long to the eternal disgrace of Europe, but more particularly to that of England, must be annihilated, and we are perfectly satisfied that the glorious atchievement shall be reserved for a Christian prince, whose conduct is influenced by some other principles than selfish policy. The Mediterranean would then be a Russian sea, and a trifling force would be sufficient to bar the entrance at Gibraltar.

The first act of American conquest, and we have shewed some little squinting that way already, will be executed against Mexico; it will be but a step then to go through the Istmus of Darien, into South America. After that it will be a mere Christmas frolic, as one of our warriors said last war, to reach Terra del Fuego, sending the right wing of our army by the way or Peru and Chili, the left through Buenos Ayres and the Brazils, and the centre along the top of the Andes. The Amazons and Patagonians might give us a little trouble, but they would finally succumb. This being completed that little cluster of islands, called the West Indies, would fall of course.

INDIAN INTELLIGENCE.

AUGUSTA, May 27.

We have been politely favored with a letter from Maj. Gen. Jackson, to Brig. Gen. Glasscock, from which we have made the following extract:

"Camp, on line of march, 16 miles in advance of Fort Gadsden, May 7."

"I cannot adequately express my feeling on the outrageous and inhuman attack of capt. Wright and party, on the superannuated men and women of the friendly Chehaw village, which you recite. It will be a stigma on the American nation, unless the general government use their endeavors to bring the perpetrators to justice. I have ordered Wright to be arrested, and he shall be tried by a military court. I have written to the Governor of Georgia on the subject, expressing my astonishment at his unwarranted interference with my duties."

"I congratulate you on the safe march of your brigade to Fort Early, with a hope that the brave Georgians under your command, who have encountered the dangers, fatigues, and privations of a long march in an unfriendly country, may be speedily restored, in health, to their families and homes."

"I am now on my march to Pensacola which place I shall have probably to occupy with an American garrison."

New-York, June 5.

DISTURBANCE AT THE STATE PRISON.

For some days past the prisoners confined in the state prison at Greenwich, about 600 in number, had manifested a refractory disposition, refusing to comply with the rules and regulations of the prison, singing bawdy songs, blackguarding the people as they passed by, and even offering violence to their keepers. This spirit of insubordination was carried to such an extent that the authority found it necessary to order out, yesterday, a company of flying artillery to the support of the state-prison guards; and it was not until they fired upon the prisoners, that order could be restored. About sixty of the ringleaders were seized, put in irons, and immered in the dungeons.

In consequence of the yellow fever having appeared at Charleston, S. C. the last season, the Board of Health of that city have published some very judicious regulations to prevent a recurrence of that fatal disease; and some of them are very severe. A person who neglects to open his cellar doors for a few hours, every day is liable to a penalty of one thousand dollars.

We are sorry to state that a serious dispute has occurred between generals Jackson and Scott which we fear will eventuate in a serious manner. Gen. Jackson intends, as soon as he gets through the present campaign, to repair to New-York, for the purpose of calling Scott out. We have learnt the points which created the dispute, but do not, at this time, feel ourselves authorised to state them.—Savannah Repub.

From the Augusta Chronicle of May 20.

The Crops.—We have conversed with a gentleman of intelligence from the up country, whose means of information are pretty extensive. He informs that the crops of Cotton are not so materially injured as was expected—that a number of the Cotton Plantations which were supposed to be destroyed are vegetating luxuriantly; and the farmer will suffer, from the late frost, little or no injury in that valuable article, except where a premature apprehension induced him to plough up his ground and re-plant it with corn.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER—DATED,

Washington City, June 2, 1818.

"The British consul general, A. St. John Baker, is about to depart for Europe; the ostensible cause of his departure is the recovery of his health, but it is sufficient to look in his face to see that it is only a common diplomatic disease which may be aggravated or cured at discretion; the real object is diplomatic; the English cabinet has expressed some hesitation in regard to certain subjects in Mr. Bigot's dispatches; and the fate of the two English emissaries, so unexpectedly executed in Florida, and the speculation carrying on between the Spanish agents and some persons in this place, opens a field of corruption so wide and comprehensive, that the details will not be submitted to paper. Mr. Baker goes prepared to state the facts from his immediate knowledge; for no man is better acquainted with men and things here. The chevalier Colonel Sarmiento is also preparing to visit Madrid, but his business appears to relate to the mercantile affairs of some Americans on the West Coast; he received 27,000 dollars for one service of this kind, but the object for which he received the douceur failed and he will not refund."

THE GREAT SEA SERPENT.

From the Salem Register of the 3d inst.

Last Sunday arrived at Marblehead; the schr. Amity, Capt. John Collier, with several other vessels from the Banks. Small fares all. Saturday, May 30, P. M. about 5 miles from the Lights he saw the Great Fish. He passed him abeam, about half a mile distant. He appeared to be laying in a coil, having his head about four feet out of water, and to be about as large as a barrel. At first sight it seemed to be a wreck, or something unusual on the water, or as a gondola turned over. But while observing him, he gave several shakes, and threw himself out of the coil and disappeared. Capt. C. thinks that Capt Snow, who arrived in a Beverly schr. astern, at the time, must have had a better view of him. We remark that it were to be wished that the public curiosity, so long excited, might be gratified by the actual taking of this Fish.—Nothing discovers uncommon danger in the attempt, and the public curiosity would amply reward the success.

The Advocate states the arrival at New York of an Englishman, bringing with him 51 persons, stock, utensils and 100,000l. sterling, with a view of making a permanent settlement in the Illinois.

An attempt was made to rob the mail carrier on the route from Auburn to Oswego, on the night of the 22d ult. by a fellow who jumped from behind a tree, and made a grasp at the bridle of the horse. The horse being frightened, sprung to the opposite side of the path, when another villain made a pass at him with a club. The carrier then applied spurs, and made his escape.

MAIL ROBBERS.

United States
vs
Wm. Wood

After the conviction in this case the prisoner's counsel moved the Court to arrest the judgement, on the ground, among others, in an error in the caption of the Indictment, which states the Court of the United States, for the Pennsylvania District, whereas, as was argued, since the passage of the late Act of Congress, dated the 20th day of April, 1818, for dividing the state of Pennsylvania, into two judicial districts, there is no District of Pennsylvania, but Eastern and Western District of Pennsylvania. The court overruled this objection, but determined that as the offence charged did not appear by the Indictment to have been committed in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, there was no judicial evidence of the perpetration of the offence within the jurisisdiction of the Circuit Court of the Eastern District, and consequently that, for this reason, the judgment be arrested. The prisoner was then recommitted for further prosecution.

SONG.

When clouds that angel face deform,
Anxious I view the growing storm;
When angry lightnings arm thine eye
And tell the gathering tempest's nigh,
I curse the sex and bid adieu,
To female friendship, love and you.

But when soft passions rule your breast,
And each kind look, some love has drest;
When cloudless smiles around you play,
And give the world a holiday,
I bless the hour when first I knew,
Dear female friendship, love and you.

MONTARGIS.

From the "Olio" of a desultory Reader.

Milton, travelling in his youth in Italy, saw at Florence, a comedy called Adam, written by one Andreino, and dedicated to Mary de Medicis, queen of France. The subject of this play was the fall of man, The dramatis personæ were our Creator, the angels, Adam, Eve, the devils, the serpent, death and the seven deadly sins. This subject so unsuitable for the drama, but perfectly in unison with the absurd genius of the Italian theatre of those days, was treated in a manner, congenial with the extravagancies of the plot, The scene opened with a chorus of angels, and one of them burst out into the following rhapsody.

"Let the rainbow be the fiddle stick of the "firmament, the seven planets the gamut; let "time beat the measure, and the winds modu- "late the flats and sharps, &c."

Thus the piece opened, and every scene produced a new profusion of extravagancies. The mind of Milton perceived the majesty of the subject through all its absurdities, and that which was ill calculated for the stage, might nevertheless, form the basis of an epic poem for the genuis of Milton, and for his alone. He took from this singular farrago the idea of the most noble work that the human mind has ever conceived, and he executed it happily, twenty years after he had formed the design. Thus Pythagoras owed the invention of music to the noise of forge hammers, and Newton conceived the first idea of the laws of gravitation, from seeing an apple fall from a tree.

The famous ear-rings of Cleopatra were of pearl, and cost 750,000 dollars. Julius Cæsar presented a pearl to Servilia, the mother of Brutus, for which he paid 240,000. Of modern pearls, the largest upon record is that which in the year 1795, belonged to the king of Spain; probably king Joseph made free with it. It resembled a small pear in size & form. The Russians are fonder of this gem than any other. The pearls of Britain, were celebrated by the Romans, and Suetonius reports that Cæsar was induced to undertake his British expedition for their sake, and that they were so large that it was necessary to take the hand to feel the weight of a single one. Pennant supposes that Cæsar only heard this by report. It is however asserted by Pliny and Tacitus that Cæsar brought home a buckler made with Pearls, which he hung up in the temple of Venus Genetrix.

Whole Tickets, halves and quarters, to be had of THOMAS JANUARY, who is the Chairman and Treasurer for the managers.

While the above Scheme presents a brilliant prospect to the purchasers of tickets of acquiring fortunes without incurring much risk, the object of the Lottery is such as to inspire the Managers with the most flattering hope that they will be enabled to announce, in a very few weeks, the commencement of the drawing. Every benevolent heart, whose sensibilities are alive to the sufferings of the poor, the sick and the infirm, and to the most efficient means of affording them permanent comfort and relief, will cordially unite with the Managers in the promotion of the speedy success of this Lottery. The completion of the Hospital Building, already in progress; and its preparation for the early reception of the suffering victims of misfortune and disease in the state at large, are objects which forcibly and will not in vain, appeal to the hearts and the heads of an intelligent and charitable community. The Managers confidently rely upon these considerations, and on the number of prizes compared with the blanks, rendering the chances of obtaining the former unusually great, for a very rapid sale of tickets,

INFORMATION WANTED

GEORGE FOSSE EHLER requests information of his wife GERTROUT, who arrived with him in Philadelphia, in August last, and there engaged with a western merchant to serve him one year for transporting himself and family to the western country, but being taken dangerously ill of a fever at Loudon, Franklin county, Penn.—his wife and three children proceeded on with the waggons. At this place he was confined by sickness for three months, and has ever since been engaged in discharging the heavy expences incurred by it. But not being in possession of the name or place of residence of the merchants, other than, that he lived 30 miles below Pittsburgh, in the state of Ohio, he particularly requests the merchant to send him the requisite information by directing a letter to him at Pittsburgh, Pa. Feb. 18.
